La conclusione del procedimento amministrativo

Vevey is a beautiful little town on the shore of a very blue lake in Switzerland. Tourism is the business of the place, and there are many hotels. American tourists particularly like the hotel called the Trois Couronnes. Two years ago, a young American named Frederick Winterbourne spent a few days there.

L'accesso agli atti "documentale" (ai sensi della legge 241/90)

Winterbourne was twenty-seven years old and had lived in Geneva for a long time. He had been at school and university there. When his friends spoke of him, they usually said that he was at Geneva "studying". When certain other people spoke of him they said that he spent so much time in Geneva because he was very attached to a lady who lived there.

La SCIA

"Have you noticed an American family here at the hotel?" asked Winterbourne. "A family called Miller?". "A mother, a daughter, a little boy, and a courier? Oh yes! I've notice them!" said Mrs Costello. "I confess I'm very exclusive, but in New York you have to be. There are so many vulgar people in society there days. That Miller family is a perfect example".
